Description of the New York end of the bridge, which will extend along the avenue of the river front from Sixtleth street as far south as Pier No. 1. The trustees claim that such a plan is feasible and will facilitate the handling of all freight, business of the city.

The plan is to drop and pick up freight at each of the piers, thus saving money to the railroad companies and expediting shipment. The present lighterage system necessitates the rehandling of all freight congressions. The ground is liked by the railroad companies and the river, the same as in Liverpool. The plan is liked by the railroad companies. New York used to have 40 per cent of the liver, the same as in Liverpool. The plan is liked by the railroad companies. New York used to have 40 per cent of the beinge country, because it is cheaper to ship from Boston and Philadelphia than by way of New York. The bridge extension will be a great saving of money to the railroad companies and expenditing in the country, because it is cheaper to ship from Boston and Philadelphia than by way of New York. The bridge extension will be a great saving of money to the railroad companies and will defer to New York the percentage of the light of the reliroad companies and will be a great saving of money to the railroad companies and will be reasy within the next three weeks.
